In six full-page newspaper ads spanning the state, sixty Georgia groups call for Medicaid expansion

Under the American Rescue Plan, Georgia could attract $1.3 Billion in new federal Medicaid funds over two years, covering the costs of Medicaid expansion and saving $710 million that could be put towards other state priorities

Atlanta, Georgia – Full page ads calling for Medicaid expansion in Georgia will run in the Atlanta Journal-Constitution on Thursday, March 25th, and today, March 24th, in the Augusta Chronicle, Barrow News Journal, Marietta Daily Journal, Northeast Georgian (Habersham Co.), and Vidalia Advance. The ads have been placed by Cover Georgia, a coalition of consumer, patient, health care provider, small business, and civic groups, which aims to create a pathway of health coverage for all Georgians.

The recently passed American Rescue Plan gives states who have not yet extended health coverage to low-income adults an additional incentive to do so. If Georgia allows adults with incomes of less than 138% of the federal poverty line ($17,775 for an individual and $36,570 for a family of four) to enroll in Medicaid coverage, the federal government will add 5% to the state's Medicaid funding formula for a two-year period. The funding increase would add up to $1.3 Billion, which would more than cover the costs of coverage expansion and give Georgia an additional $710 million in savings which could be put towards other state spending.

"The time is right for the state of Georgia to accept the unique opportunity that is now available. The state will benefit fiscally by accepting this offer by the federal government to pay almost all of the costs of extending coverage to more Georgians," said Dr Clyde Watkins, Chairman of the Health & Public Policy Committee at the American College of Physicians, Georgia chapter. "Providing coverage to more Georgians will help the "safety net" of physicians, hospitals, and academic medical centers better serve their low-income patients and reduce cost-shifting to the rest of Georgians. Increasing access to care with coverage will strengthen rural health care in Georgia and improve the health of Georgians."

"The opportunity to expand coverage to low-income, uninsured Georgians was already a good deal for our state, and the new incentive makes it too good a deal to pass up," said Laura Colbert, Executive Director of Georgians for a Healthy Future. "Half a million Georgians would gain coverage and the extra funding could be used to accelerate our state's recovery from COVID-19. We have the rare opportunity to emerge from a public health crisis healthier and stronger than before. Georgia should absolutely take advantage of this one-time deal."

"The Georgia Alliance of Community Hospitals supports this measure in order to rebuild the strength of our institutions," said Monty Veazey, President/CEO of the Georgia Alliance of Community Hospitals. "The COVID-19 pandemic has placed a greater burden than ever on our health care delivery system, and on Georgia's working families. Two rural hospitals have closed in the last year and many more in all parts of Georgia have been brought to the brink of collapse. Nothing could more effectively support rural hospitals and the communities they serve medically and for which they provide an economic engine."

"Expanding Medicaid would greatly help small business owners, solo entrepreneurs and small business employees across the state who are struggling to access and afford health coverage," said Rachel Shanklin, Georgia Outreach Manager for Small Business Majority. "And small business owners strongly support this proposal: A recent survey found 6 in 10 Georgia small businesses support expanding eligibility for the state's Medicaid program. Expanding Georgia's Medicaid program will lower costs for small businesses and their employees, which is critical for businesses as they recover from the economic effects of the pandemic and put employees back to work."

Background on Medicaid expansion:

Georgia is one of only 12 states that have not yet extended health insurance coverage to adult residents with incomes of less than 138% of the federal poverty line. An estimated 480,000-600,000 Georgians would be eligible for coverage under Medicaid expansion.

The federal government would pay at least 90% of the costs of the program in perpetuity and the state would cover the remaining 10% share. Georgia's estimated annual share of costs would be $275 million.

By contrast, the Governor's Pathways waiver is estimated to cover 269,000 Georgians and cost as much as $651 million annually.
